

Hello. My name is Gabriel Kothe and I'm from Brazil. I have been working with software development over 10 years now, with a focus on mobile about 4 years (javascript technologies) and I also have a degree in Computer Science.

The three companies that I worked so far were somewhat small and didn't have much team cohesion (if any at all). So I have never actually had the opportunity to work with real team with good communication and organized system, which is something very important on big and complex projects. So that is one of main things I'm searching for right now because I want to live that experience, for that someday, maybe, I might be able to lead a team.

Another thing is that I'm looking for to improve is my coding and design patterns. Those companies that worked for were kind of weak in this area, there was no default coding patterns on the software, so in the end they look kind of messy as a whole. Also I'm looking to get involved with Unit Testing, because again, none of those companies used it and I know they are important.

I'm also always very eager to learn and research new technologies, when the need arises. For me, most of the fun of our line of work lies in the challenges that it presented us. In other words, if I stay too much time in my comfort zone I get bored.

More information about me and my projects can be found on the links below:

My website: <https://gkothe.github.io/web/>

My CV: https://gkothe.github.io/web/curriculos/cv_gabriel_kothe_en.pdf

For contact:

My email: g.kothe@hotmail.com

My WhatsApp: +55 51 9 8497 0310